

Proposal of New Members:

- Rick Guerrero

- Mike Adams

When a new member proposal is approved by the board, the board then presents it to club. At this time, the entire membership is informed of the potential new member proposal and is given seven days to voice opposition or concern about the new member proposal. This must be done in writing. After seven days, the board will review any points of opposition and consider them before voting. If no written opposition is received, then the member is considered "accepted" by the club. The new member is then contacted and informed of the good news. The new member is then invited to their first meeting as a new Rotary Member and the club is enriched by the growth. Each new member will be assigned a mentor and will receive Rotary orientation.
